as we see it

Television has gained such unparalleled success as an entertainment medium that mention of TV automatically brings to mind star performers and their programs. In a way that is regrettable, for it is in the less publicized and less discussed field of lasting public service that television is making its greatest contribution to American life.

As an example, an American Medical Association survey this year found 77 percent of county medical societies and 91 percent of state societies use some form of radio and television. Dr. Edward J. McCormick, president of AMA, has said:

"Such shows have given the entire Nation a better concept of good health and how to preserve it—and a better understanding of the newest techniques, discoveries and devices which spell continued medical progress. TV allows medical information to be delivered in a direct, personalized manner with dramatic appeal. It brings the family doctor into the homes of millions to talk medicine face to face, in understandable terms."

The dissemination of information about medicine is but one of many public services being performed every day. Educational shows for children as well as adults, the objective interpretation of current events, the presentation of civic problems by local government leaders, these and many others are presented regularly.

We feel television's public service achievements deserve recognition from viewers, and from critics who scoff without bothering to understand just how much more there is to television than comics and dramas.

It might be well if the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters were to prepare an annual summary of TV's public service ventures and publicize it. Such a summary might make all of us aware of the medium's serious side.

NEW YORK

Bob Stahl reports:

CLAUDETTE COLBERT has been signed for a new series of situation comedies, based on a mother-daughter relationship. The series, still untitled, will be released on a network basis. The films will be produced by Rockhill Productions . . . RALPH EDWARDS had to drop TALLULAH BANKHEAD as "surprise" subject of This Is Your Life when a columnist tipped her. This isn't the first leak.

Ever wonder why the commercial on the Milton Berle program never comes until after the show's halfway mark? Seems that the advertising agency wants to make certain that as many viewers as possible see the sponsor's plug. And by waiting until after BISHOP FULTON J. SHEEN's Life Is Worth Living winds up at 8:30 P.M. on a competing network, it's believed that the Berle commercial will get its fullest quota of viewers.

MAURICE EVANS set to star in a two-hour version of SHAKESPEARE's "Richard II" January 24 on Hall of Fame. SARAH CHURCHILL, hostess and occasional star of the series, will play the queen . . . She and producer ALBERT McCLEERY will come to New York from Hollywood three weeks prior to the telecast to sign other actors.

I Love Lucy, after slipping from first place last month for the first time, is back at the top of the National TV ratings for November. Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts climbed to second spot, with Dragnet, which topped Lucy in October, slipping back to third place.

JIM BACKUS, co-star with JOAN DAVIS on the I Married Joan show, steadfastly refuses to travel by air. "I don't fly," Jim explains, "because of my religion. I'm a devout coward." . . . Hollywood's younger set takes over ED SULLIVAN's Toast of the Town Jan. 3. Guesting on the show will be JUNE ALLYSON, TONY CURTIS and JANET LEIGH.

Looks as though MICKEY ROONEY's new telefilm series will replace Bonino starting Jan. 2. ROONEY plays a musical comedy star, with REGIS TOOMEY, former movie actor, heading the support . . . The Annie Oakley telefilm series tees off soon on some 80 stations sponsored by Canada Dry. GAIL DAVIS plays the title role in the show, produced by GENE AUTRY's Flying A Enterprises.

ABC is delaying the start of its new dramatic series in the Sunday night 8 to 9 period until January in order to telecast three special holiday programs in that spot on Dec. 13, 20 and 27. The format and stars of those shows have not been set . . . ABC will also televise the New Year's Eve crowds in Times Square, N. Y., prior to taking its cameras back into the studios for an all-star variety show.

Richard Carlson: he plays an FBI plant.

Actor,
Writer,
Traveler:

Now He's A TV Hero Who Fights COMMUNISM

NEW SERIES TELLS STORY OF FBI COUNTERAGENT WHO JOINED RED CELL

LATEST of the cops-and-robbers TV shows is a film series out of Hollywood called I Led Three Lives. It differs considerably from its blood brothers, however, in that its hero is drawn from real life and its villains are out-and-out Communists. For I Led Three Lives is based entirely on the book of the same name, written by Herbert A. Philbrick after he had spent nine years as an FBI plant in the American Communist organization.

Philbrick's role, that of a man who was an insurance man, an FBI agent and a Communist all at the same time, is played by Hollywood actor Richard Carlson—who was chosen for the role primarily because he doesn't look like an actor.

An exceptionally versatile young man still in his thirties, Carlson disclaims any intent to set himself up as a crusader. "The part," he says, "appealed to me for several reasons. I'd been offered a couple of routine private eye roles, but this thing had the ring of integrity. It tells the story of a guy who actually accomplished something. Further, it was a good financial deal. I stand to make more for this than I could ever make in pictures. Further still, it's paid over a period of time, which takes some of the sting out of the tax bite.

"But the big factor is that it gives me time to do a lot of other things I've always wanted to do—such as producing my own feature pictures. I Led Three Lives costs me maybe three months out of the year and makes a nice living for me. The rest of the time is mine to gamble with."

The gamble to date consists of three feature pictures, one of which, The Magnetic Monster, has been called the most intelligent science-fiction picture yet made in Hollywood. He has a second one, Riders to the Stars, not yet released, and is working on a third one, Gog.

Nod From The FBI

I Led Three Lives got under way only last June, when Ziv Television Programs acquired the rights to Philbrick's book and also acquired the blessing of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover for the project. With Philbrick taken on as a consultant and Carlson signed to a three-year contract calling for 39 half-hour films per year, the series went into production with a minimum of fanfare and a maximum of effectiveness.

"We shot 14 right off the bat," Carlson says, "doing the last five in just 10 days to free me for Black Lagoon at Universal. They may not be arty, but the exteriors are real, all shot on location, and the stories are 100 percent factual."

Those two factors have apparently done the trick, for the series went into syndication only last September—and a month later had already been sold to 111 stations.

"The only reaction I was afraid of," Carlson says, "was that we might be accused of Red-baiting, the temper of the times being what it is. But with Philbrick's book as our source, who can quarrel with us?"

Carlson, a summa cum laude graduate of the University of Minnesota, complete with Phi Beta Kappa key, does not look upon I Led Three Lives as any personal contribution to the fight against Communism. "I'm an actor," he says, "and the part is interesting and has stature. Philbrick is the guy who made the contribution, not me."

Ziv Disclaims Crusade

Ziv also enters a disclaimer to any crusading intent. "We are not," a company executive insists, "a corporate knight in shining armor. We're in the entertainment business. We're not trying to deliver a message. That's not our field. Our chief purpose is to find good story properties, turn them into good films and sell them. We think I Led Three Lives is good, exciting entertainment, and we know darned well we're selling it."

Many regional sponsors, however, have bought the show because of it's documented anti-Communist format, figuring it is good public service material and thus a natural for their institutional kind of advertising. Oil and steel companies, banks, utility companies and other such concerns, many of whom have never before used television as an advertising medium, have picked up the series and are already making noises that sound like long-term renewal demands.

Carlson is enthusiastic about television, but primarily from an economic standpoint. He doesn't watch it very often. "The actor who turns down a series," he says, "is out of his mind. It's hard work, to be sure, much harder than doing a feature picture, but you can make more money over a longer period of time and you have much more time to yourself. This is no longer a plaything. It makes good economic sense and I'm for it. I'm not only for it, I'm in it. Smartest move I ever made."

High Hat Debut

Carlson made his initial stab at TV a little over a year ago, turning out two 15-minute pilot films called Richard's Poor Almanac. The setting was the study of his Sherman Oaks home, with Carlson's wife and two youngsters running in and out of the proceedings, neighbors dropping by to chat and Carlson himself reading passages of poetry and prose.

A little too erudite for the commercial market, the films are just now beginning to stir interest. "But," Carlson says, "they'll have to wait awhile. I'm already up to my ears with Ziv and my own features."

Carlson is a man apparently born to be versatile. He has appeared in no less than 34 pictures and six Broadway plays, and he toured the nation as the lead in the road company of Mister Roberts. He also is a novelist, short story writer, director, producer, versifier, contributor to national magazines, world traveler, husband and father. His two sons, 12 and 10, like to kid him about being on television and have a weekly ritual whereby they announce in loud tones at 6:55 P.M. every Sunday night that they are going upstairs to watch Private Secretary, which plays opposite I Led Three Lives in Los Angeles.

"I was a little hurt first time they pulled it on me," Carlson chuckles, "but they came sneaking back downstairs at 7, giggling fit to bust. It's now a running gag—and I think I'd be hurt if they didn't pull it."

Reds don't know about that door: real scenes and stories give series its impact.

SANTA IS WATCHING TV--

Heading for the range: their Western accoutrements are in the best TV tradition.

Feeding the baby: the magic attribute of this doll is the name, Rickey, Jr.

Time for a puppet show: Howdy and his friend Clarabell come right into a home.

Ready to blast off: ray guns and space helmets arm these two children.

WHILE television hasn't yet reached the North Pole—at least according to the Federal Communications Commission which should know—there's no doubt the medium has caught up with a certain gentleman in that far-off land. We refer, of course, to Santa Claus. And the proof can be found in the Nation's toy stores where hundreds of different items have been inspired by television programs. They range from dolls and bathinettes labeled Rickey, Jr., to space helmets, ray guns, cowboy equipment and puppets. For the others—well, just visit any convenient store.

The Voice Of FIRESTONE

IT'S CELEBRATING

ALL THINGS considered, it comes as a minor miracle that The Voice of Firestone has celebrated a 25th anniversary. For all that it's a very pleasant show, the Voice has had the misfortune for several years now to be pitched up against Arthur Godfrey and his Talent Scouts, the sort of competition that doesn't leave many folks around to watch anybody else. In the high-pressure radio-TV world, where ratings are usually the only things that matter, this would seem to make the Firestone show an extremely unusual item.

Nonetheless, Nov. 30 marked the 25th anniversary on the air and the Voice people went to town. They ex-

. . . while horn players review score . . .

. . . a violinist arises to perform . . .

. . . and celloist, harpist take breather.

Rise Stevens, famed Metropolitan Opera singer, takes the Firestone spotlight.

25 YEARS OF GOOD MUSIC

panded their usual half-hour to an hour for the occasion, booked in six singers from the Metropolitan Opera instead of their usual one or two, doubled the chorus and added ten members to their 48 piece orchestra.

The initial broadcast of the show (which was on radio, of course) took place on Dec. 3, 1928, so the anniversary actually was pushed up a few days. The TV version debuted on Sept. 5, 1949 which makes it one of the more aged items on TV also.

It is held in some quarters that the original reason the Firestones went into the music sponsoring business was that Mrs. Harvey Firestone, Sr. was intensely interested in music, with the rest of the family not far behind in their fervor. Mrs. Firestone demonstrated her love in a very material way, being the composer of both the opening and closing themes on the show, If I Could Tell You and In My Garden.

Perhaps the most distinguishing characteristic of The Voice of Firestone is the elegant and economical conducting of Howard Barlow, who hardly ever lets on that he knows the TV cameras are trained on him. Mr. Barlow, an old hand in the music business, was once CBS musical director and frequently conducted the crack CBS Symphony Orchestra.

When asked why The Voice of Firestone sticks pretty much to the well-worn, familiar operatic and musical comedy classics, he explained that it wasn't due to any lack of flexibility on his part or on the part of the sponsor. But any time they try to ring anything outside the standard repertoire they are inundated with mail from irate fans.

One major reason why the Voice has been able to stay on all these years without large ratings is that it's what is called an institutional show; that is, more interested in public good will than in selling tires. The Firestones want as many people to watch as possible, but they still refuse to deviate from their purpose of presenting top singers doing top-flight music.

As a matter of fact, practically every major opera singer in the U.S. has appeared at one time or another on the show.

Incidentally, the Firestones were the first ever to sponsor a television broadcast, doing so on a one-shot program way back on Nov. 28, 1943. It just may be that their audience was so small then that anything afterward seemed like an improvement.

Actually, although the audience pull of Godfrey is greater than that of the Firestone program, it's probable that every one of those Firestone fans will still be tuning in ten years from now to enjoy the old familiar strains. Just as they've been doing these past 25 years.

TV's Week: The federal government has decided to prosecute a suspected dope trafficker whom WNBQ's Jim Hurlbut recently exposed. Hurlbut, after a dogged nine months of investigation, set up the arrest of a local doctor for peddling the synthetic narcotic Dolophine to addicts, even recording a "sale" through hidden cameras and tape recorders. The films were shown on NBC-TV's Today. Then Uncle Sam's boys found the medico had a record for such offenses and brought charges.

Younger

Bev Younger, whose characterization of Gracie, the warm-hearted waitress, made Studs Place memorable has joined the cast of the new Chet Roble-Studs Terkel vehicle, Warehouse-TV as a regular—and the show has perked up plenty. She's "Bev, the secretary" now. Bev, a true trouper, did one Channel 7 Warehouse show despite a bad impacted tooth.

Newest teaching tool at the Board of Education's Chicago Teachers College is an intramural TV system, using portable TV cameras weighing only 20 pounds. The picture is fed directly through cables to school sets. Example of its value: a whole roomful of student teachers can secretly "sit in" on interviews with kids to observe guidance techniques.

The Chicago Educational Television Association, which just voted five more schools to full membership, is still canvassing for a general manager for Channel 11. The Association, by the way, will likely turn thumbs down on the suggestion for calling the station "WRRR." Sounds more like a gargle, 'tis said.

Earl Nightingale, WGN-TV's suave philosopher, is off on vacation Dec. 18. No substitute set. Plans to get caustic columnist Sydney Harris fell through.

Another feminine TVendor makes good: Eloise Kummer has been booked for 13 more weeks of live commercial chats on Jack Angell's newscasts on Channel 5. When not making pretty pitches, Eloise emotes on NBC-TV's early AM sudser, The Bennetts.

The New Show: Spellbinding Bishop Fulton J. Sheen will appeal for funds to build a national religious shrine in Washington, D. C., on a special telecast Sat., Dec. 5 at 12:30 PM. And on the local front, WBBM-TV's Lee Phillip, a real-life Sunday School teacher, will moderate a Sunday morning video Bible quiz starting Dec. 6. Clergy from three leading faiths will rotate as guests.

Advance Tips on Shows: The Kuklapolitans are on the move again. Kukla, Fran and Ollie will be seen a half-hour earlier after Sunday Dec. 20 when it swaps spots on WNBQ (Channel 5) with Excursion.

Walter

An impressive roster of guest conductors has been lined up to spell Fritz Reiner in conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in telecasts via Channel 9. Show has been renewed for 13 weeks. Schedule in part reads: Dec. 9, Desire Defauw; Dec. 16, George Schick; Dec. 23, Erich Leinsdorf, and on Dec. 30 in a year-end concert, Fritz Reiner again. In January famed conductor-composer Igor Stravinsky will appear and in February the great Bruno Walter will wield the baton.

Letters to the Editor

—YOU TELL TELEVISION

Please address all letters to Managing Editor, c/o TV GUIDE, 731 S. Plymouth Court, Chicago 5, Ill.

That Channel 7 Critic

I am glad that ABC has some fine new shows this fall. I've always felt there should be more competition on the channels. However, I don't see what WBKB is carrying the Tom Duggan Show for. It's in very poor taste. Duggan is always complaining about some other show or star.—Jim McQuaid, Broadview, Ill.

Curbstone Cowpoke

Tree

Why do viewers have to put up with Ernie Simon's friend, Jim Tree, the laughing ex-cowboy — if you call it laughing? Surely there must be enough other people passing by on the street who would be more interesting than a has-been cowboy? — Mrs. James Slavo, Dyer, Ind.

Is Liberace Too Extreme?

My girl friend and I, who are 12 and 15, are unable to understand why Liberace looks so feminine. Why doesn't he cut his hair and look more masculine? It is embarrassing to see a man of his age and talent behaving in this manner. Could you please help two confused girls to understand Liberace?—Darlene Medina, Hampshire, Ill. and Maxine Allen, Kirkland, Ill. (Such criticisms have been made of this top pianist. His show is popular and successful, nevertheless. Before his TV triumph, Liberace always looked and acted the same.—Ed.)

Gone—But Not Quite Forgotten

I would like to know if there is any chance of the show, They Stand Accused, coming back to television. It was carried on WGN-TV, Channel 9.—Cheryl Lee Surendonk, Racine, Wis. (Local drama series was discontinued over a year and a half ago. No word on its return.—Ed.)

Just for Show

I have heard the heart necklace Arlene Francis always wears is a hearing aid. Is this true?—Loretta Wilson, Bettendorf, Iowa. (No—she can hear John Daly perfectly well.—Ed.)

Not on the Ball

Wouldn't it be possible to get some TV cameramen who know how to cover a football game instead of the "fancy-dans" that switch from one shot to another in the middle of a play and then can't find who has the ball until the play is over? And it peeves me to have them use so many long panoramic shots which show only a bunch of players scrambling around. Cameramen are trying to be artistic and are losing sight of the ball carrier.—G. R. Lange, Elmwood Park, Ill.

When Emcees Should Be Mum

I have a pet peeve, and I wonder how many other viewers share it with me. I hate, despise and detest hearing ladies addressed as "Ma" or "Mom" by "cute" announcers and emcees.—Mrs. K. W., Batavia, Ill.

Stands Back of Jack

Brickhouse

Just who the heck does Ed Pazdur think he is to criticize Jack Brickhouse? It was bad enough when he said that Jack's way of announcing wrestling matches was nauseous, but now he has to attack him personally, calling him "pudgy" which is certainly Brickhouse's own affair. Along with a lot of other people, I like wrestling and want a serious and intelligent announcer. You should boot Ed Pazdur out of your magazine and into the street where he belongs.—Mrs. L. Benninghoff, South Bend, Ind.

SPORTSCAST

by ED PAZDUR

Ever hear of an expert's expert?

WELL SIR, that's another monicker for WNBQ's Joe Wilson, easily the most exacting, meticulous sportscaster in the city.

Unlike some broadcasters, Wilson conscientiously tackles every show, studio produced or remote, with energetic fervor. At times he's a bit too technical in his proficiency for novices or housewives to follow. Thus Wilson becomes too good occasionally and is tabbed as the expert's expert!

Wilson

Joe Wilson fans are loyal. When the bespectacled, mustachioed sportscaster televised hockey last year, he reported the progress of the game and sold hockey at the same time. When Wilson exclaimed "you gotta see hockey at least once in person," fans turned out in droves. Even when the Hawks floundered in the cellar during the late '40's, Wilson packed the house. This year, again in the cellar, but without TV, the Black Hawks are attracting less than 9,000 per contest. Last year with TV and Wilson, the Hawks averaged over 13,000 per game!

When in Tom Duggan's own vernacular, WNBQ dropped him down the elevator shaft, Joe Wilson took over Duggan's TV assignments at Maywood and Sportsman's Park. Attendance at the tracks climbed noticeably!

Cuffnotes: Bernard Glickman, sponsor of Monday night fights over WGN-TV, manages fighters as a hobby . . . Bob Elson and Jack Brickhouse still miffed by the blistering criticism administered by Hammond Times' sports editor John Whitaker . . . Two Chicago agencies are working overtime in an effort to televise Black Hawk hockey games before the new year.

5 4 BOXING—New York
Joey Giambra vs. Jimmy Herring, middleweights, 10 rounds.

JIMMY POWERS' RATINGS:

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
Giambra	5	36	2	0	20
Herring	not	61	9	2	23

This is Giambra's debut as a garden main-eventer. Sometimes this has a bearing on a boxer's performance. He generally doesn't match his press and previous-performance reports. Giambra is a good boxer. Herring also boxes fairly well, so for a change, this Friday's showing is a match of brains instead of brawn. Herring has been an in-and-outer. He performs well, then falls by the wayside. Against punchers, he is a bit on the shy side. Jimmy is the better hitter of the two, but will be second best in this show.

7 BOXING—From Washington
Carmine Fiore vs. Phil Kim, welterweights, 10 rounds.

JIMMY POWERS' RATING:

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
Fiore	15	42	15	5	16
Kim	not	40	8	3	27

Fiore is a good club fighter and in this bout against one as rugged as himself, Carmine will have a considerable weight advantage which should be of great help down the stretch. Fiore comes up with a good fight now and then to keep him in contention. A recent victory over Womber and close bouts with Martinez and Basilio makes him available for the tops in his class. Kim recently gave the New Orleans fans an entertaining evening against their Ralph Dupre, but the difference in weight against Fiore will cause him to lose some of his effective in-fighting, for which he is mostly noted. Fiore is the pick here.

Asks for Puppets in PM

I'd like to say how much I enjoyed that clever morning program, Baird Puppets. It should come back and at an evening time period when hubby and the whole family could enjoy it. And I think a good show like that could be stretched out to a whole hour.—Weekly Reader, Oak Lawn, Ill. (Baird Puppets now appear at frequent intervals on Your Show of Shows. Watch for the announcements in your listings.—Ed.)

Sees Red—and Enjoys It

Skelton

After watching the Red Skelton Show this season, I think he's wonderful and the show should be rated on top. Red has a great personality, and besides being a fine comedian, can act. Last but not least, Red has a terrific voice, and I, for one, hope he sings a little on all his shows. By the way, I thought your recent story on Red's comeback was excellent.—Mr. John Kolodziejski, Chicago.

Artist or Artisan?

On a recent Name's the Same telecast, the last guest was one Paul Revere. When asked whether his namesake was engaged in the arts, he answered "No." While Paul Revere was primarily noted for patriotic activities, he also distinguished himself as a metalsmith, particularly in copper and brass, and his handiwork is still used as models. We even have a fine brass candlestick replica of Revere's work that shows his artistry. Why did the guest then deny he was in the arts?—C. S. Kostulski, Warrenville, Ill. (Although Paul Revere is honored as a fine metal worker, it is debatable whether he was engaged in the fine arts—music, painting, sculpture, etc., as an artist. He was primarily an artisan or craftsman.—Ed.)

9:00 2 4 25 BOXING-From Cleveland
Rocky Castellani vs. Gil Turner, 10 rounds, middleweights.

JIMMY POWERS' RATING

	Rated	W	L	D	KO's
Castellani	3	46	0	2	8
Turner	Not	41	3	0	30

This is Cleveland's big Christmas fund show. Castellani, now a resident of Cleveland, is the home-town boy in this bout. Rocky has been a winning boxer in his new home city, so this all-open-main-go is just as important in Cleveland as it might have been in Philadelphia. This is Turner's second middleweight try of importance against a contending boxer. Giardello defeated Gil in an upset months back and his style is somewhat on the Castellani type. I like Gil in this one. He has a steady walk-in body attack which will be too much for the light-punching Castellani.

NEW YORK 1, N.Y.

A brew for Dave Garroway, Shirley Harmer.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

DAVE GARROWAY SHOW

IT'S BEING telecast from New York, but the new Dave Garroway Show (NBC) has that relaxed approach that wowed the Nation when he rode to fame with Garroway At Large each Sunday night from Chicago. The new program is excellent even though it has not quite achieved the status of its predecessor.

The format of the new show is almost identical to the old but for some reason it doesn't yet have the kick. Perhaps that's because TV itself has outgrown the frenetic pace it once had, and the relaxed atmosphere of Garroway's Chicago show is no longer a novelty.

With the same cast week after week, the new show could almost be called Dave Garroway and Friends. Cliff Norton, the program's ace comedian, is a top hand in any musical production number, and dancers Ken Spaulding and Diane Sinclair can also sing and do comedy. Holding them all together is Garroway, with his off-beat humor and his subtle sense of showmanship.

Besides Norton, Jack Haskell is a carry-over from the Chicago program. He's a tall, rangy baritone, with one of the best and most sensitive voices on TV. His handling of ballads especially is top-drawer. Norton's solo bits are gems but are all too scarce this season. Jill Corey and Shirley Harmer, both newcomers, are the girl vocalists. Their voices are pleasant and their personalities merge fluidly with the Garroway pace.

LEAVE IT TO THE GIRLS

Eloise McElhone, Robin Chandler and Maggi McNellis

IN ATTEMPTING to revive a program like Leave It to the Girls, ABC is guilty of throwing a roadblock in the path of TV's progress. Television certainly has gone far beyond the point where it can be considered fun to see a panel of female felines give out with advice on how to deal with, enslave or ensnare the male populace. The gals may be sincere in their advice, but—who cares?

Maggi McNellis, as moderator, and the various gals who comprise the panel are all of the Stork Club ilk. Each has made a name for herself as an actress, commentator, beauty culturist or some strictly feminine careerist. The trivialities with which they deal on TV are so inane as to be absurd. After all, once they've told a viewer how to hook her man, what else is there to say?

On the show, Miss McNellis reads a letter from a viewer with a gripe or problem about men. The panelists, speaking singly or, more often, all at once, then shrill out answers. A male guest has a toy horn that he blows when he wants to disagree. He also gets a chance to crack back at the ladies with some uncomplimentary remarks about females.

Miss McNellis does an adequate job, trying her best to restrain a quartet of gabby females from talking all at once. Appearing on the panel from time to time are Eloise McElhone, Harriet Van Horne, Robin Chandler, Shirley Potash, Vanessa Brown and Florence Pritchard. Leave It to the Girls died once. They should have let it rest in peace.—R. S.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

PROTESTS grow over some of TV's 1953 crop of Santa songs. They have as much Christmas spirit as Malenkov.

Tin Pan Alley seems to have Santa confused with Tommy Manville.

The boys think the idea of St. Nick involves how much you can nick him for. The average lyrics make it sound as if Santa's workshop were turning out nothing but mink coats and convertibles. They have lines like: "Santa, Santa, you jolly old elf; stop at Tiffany's and sweep off the shelf."

You'd think Santa's reindeer were named Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane.

The next big Santa number will be: "How I'll love that North Pole cutie, when he gets here with the booty." And it won't be long until they have a bebop version called: "Dig That Crazy Chimney Sweep."

One song goes: "I get a Christmas present every week, because there's a Claus in my contract."

It makes you wonder how the boys missed: "When Santa Comes to Dixieland, We'll Be Celebrating the You-All Tide."

'The Queen' Stakes Her Crown On Television

LORETTA YOUNG, who admits to 39 summers with all the fresh-faced candor of a five-year-old who'd rather be six, is the latest of a long line of movie stars to foresake the CinemaScope screen for the kinescope tube. Up to now, the movie scions hadn't bothered much with TV's sporadic raiding of the talent rosters. But with Miss Young's defection, the situation is suddenly getting serious. For there, Hollywood sputters, looking back over its shoulder in hurt surprise, goes The Queen.

"Queen" about sums it up. At her cheerfully admitted 39, Loretta is a veteran of no less than 25 years of movie stardom. With her looks, she can afford to be cheerful. "Nobody," a Hollywood columnist grumbled recently, "has any right to be so beautiful at her age."

Miss Young, who has been unusual in many ways during her long career, is being even more unusual in television. She will, among other things, be the first star, big or little, to make 39 dramatic films and star in every one of them in a different role. Being a perfectionist, she will have no part of the "quickie" film business, which means that she will be turning out a miniature "A" quality motion picture every week—the equivalent in footage of 13 feature pictures.

Loretta has made the break from movies to TV with an apparent ease that has rather startled the industry's older hands. It started two or three years ago when she and her husband, Tom Lewis, first installed a TV set in her home. She was fascinated right off the bat—particularly by the sense of intimacy the new medium's performers seemed to have with the viewer. "This," she decided, "is for me." And "this," it might be added, was the TV of several years ago, the medium no movie star worthy of the name would have anything to do with, even from a safe distance.

On set: everything centers on Loretta.

Loretta's format, stories loosely based on or at least suggested by letters taken from her fan mail, was evolved after about a year of mental spadework. "No one person," she says, "can be credited with the idea. The title, for instance, was suggested by Sally, in Helen Ferguson's office." (Loretta and Tom's public relations expert.) "Everybody contributed something." Convinced they finally had the right idea, she and Lewis, former vice-president of Young & Rubicam, and organizer and commander during the Second World War of the Armed Forces Radio Service, formed Lewislor Enterprises, Inc., and prepared to take the calculated risk. The degree of risk involved is perhaps clarified by noting that a minimum series of 13 TV films of good quality can set somebody back a minimum of $390,000.

Surrounded By Talent

Being old hands at the entertainment business, their first thought was to surround themselves with the kind of talent only a Loretta Young could lure away from the major studios. Thus Robert Florey, an established picture director and one of the finest TV film directors in Hollywood, gave up a lucrative freelance career to throw in his lot with Lewislor. Norbert Brodine, recognized as one of the industry's topflight cameramen (The Frogmen, The Desert Fox, Sitting Pretty and the Topper pictures among dozens of others), and twice an Academy Award nominee, came to Lewislor from 20th Century Fox. And they wisely turned the actual production chores over to an experienced Desilu Productions crew.

Thus fortified, Tom and Loretta went to work. They gambled an initial $30,000 and made a half-hour pilot film. The first sponsor who saw it, Proctor & Gamble, bought it precisely 48 hours later, a record for the fast-mushrooming TV film industry.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lewis were in business, Loretta as a TV star, Lewis as a TV film producer.

Being both glamorous and an actress has been Loretta's business since she was 11 and landed a role originally intended for her older sister, Polly Ann. Two years later she played her first grown-up role, with Colleen Moore in Naughty But Nice, and it was Colleen who changed the youngster's name from Gretchen to Loretta. Endowed with a natural beauty rare even in Hollywood, and guided by a mother, for whom someone should strike a medal for native intelligence and common sense, she took to stardom like a bird taking wing.

No Family Publicity

Loretta and Lewis were married in 1940 and now have three children—Judy, Christopher and Peter. It is a cardinal rule in the Lewis family that the children's pictures never be taken for publication. Not, at any rate, until they accomplish something other than being the children of a star.

The Lewises currently keep two homes, one a large beach house in Santa Monica, the other a country place in Ojai, Cal., adjacent to the Ojai Valley Inn, which they own as an investment. The children stay at the beach house and go to school during the week, with the entire family taking off for Ojai late Friday after the final shooting for the week.

Now that she's in television for keeps, Loretta is giving little or no thought to any motion pictures in the immediate future. "Right now," she says firmly, "I'm a television girl and I love every hectic minute of it. If the public gets tired of seeing me week after week, even in a different role, that's something I'll worry about when the time comes. And if it does come, I'll have had a lot of fun while it lasted."

Loretta, at party that launched new career, greets Faye Emerson, then mingles with other guests.

MECHANICAL MEMORIZERS

TV Stars Rely on Teleprompters to Help Remember Their Lines

Performer's view of prompter in action.

Ed Sullivan's show demonstrates standard use of Teleprompter. Operator, at right, controls speed of device to correspond with star's delivery. Many shows use several prompters at different points.

ONE OF THE occupational hazards an actor has to contend with is fear of "blowing up" in his lines. The pressures of television production have greatly increased that hazard. Something had to be done to prevent the too-frequent fluffs that marred so many early TV shows.

An ingenious electronic device called the Teleprompter has been perfected and is in use in the major network studios. It is an automatically controlled prompt box which allows performers to read the script as they act their parts, yet with every appearance of delivering memorized lines or ad libbing.

Prompt boxes are oblong cases about the size of a woman's overnight bag. They work like the old-fashioned player piano, with two rollers, housed in the case, over which paper unwinds. The script, in jumbo letters, is visible at 25 or 30 feet. Synchronized boxes are placed around the set by the program director so the actor can move about freely without getting out of reading range or missing a line.

The control box is like a small key telephone switchboard, with a lever on top to control the speed and switches to stop, start and reverse. The script can be turned back during rehearsals and changes either written in directly on the paper or pasted in typed strips over the lines to be changed.

Arthur Godfrey, who makes no bones about using the Teleprompter, and has even let his viewers in on how it works, uses it with consummate art. It's impossible to tell when he's ad libbing or to catch him in the act of reading from the prompter.

Aid To Newscasters

The Teleprompter has proved especially valuable to newscasters. They need no longer just sit at a desk and read from notes. They can move around freely and refer to maps and globes or other props. One newscaster who does not want it known that he uses a prompter, says his rating went up as soon as he did.

Most of the first 10 shows, ratingwise, employ Teleprompters. Not many of the dramatic shows are using them yet, since some actors object. Dragnet, the dramatic show with the highest rating, uses Teleprompters despite being filmed, and its producer reports a 50 percent drop in rehearsal time and expense.

Big Business Too

Teleprompter is an actor's brain child. Fred Barton, then in the cast of "Mr. Roberts" on Broadway, realized what actors would be up against trying to learn their parts for quickie TV productions. He tried to peddle the idea for an automatic electrically controlled prompter for a year, but got no takers. He finally interested two 20th Century-Fox executives, Irving Kahn and Hubert J. Schlafly. It took them three years to perfect the device, which had its public unveiling at the 1952 political conventions.

The publicity this created was such an impetus that the company they formed can scarcely meet the demand for prompters. Originally devised for television, the Teleprompter is now being used widely by industrial and business concerns.

IN THE CAST

Marion Lorne: Wilkes-Barre to England.

MR. PEEPERS, the TV situation comedy which appeals even to high-brows, owes much of its success to miraculously good casting. A case in point is the part of the scatterbrained schoolteacher, Mrs. Gurney, handled by an actress virtually unheard of in America, Marion Lorne.

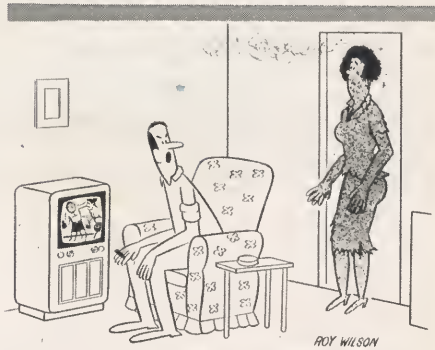
Marion, like another American actress, Tallulah Bankhead, had to go to England in order to become theatrically established. Born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., she ventured forth on a theatrical career more than 35 years ago and hasn't tired of it yet. She started out playing bit parts without much success. Then she married Walter Hackett, an American newspaperman and playwright, and the two went to England for a holiday that lasted 30 years. He wrote comedies and she starred in them. For 30 years she remained one of England's top comediennes.

In 1942, Marion and her husband returned to the U.S. He died soon after their arrival.

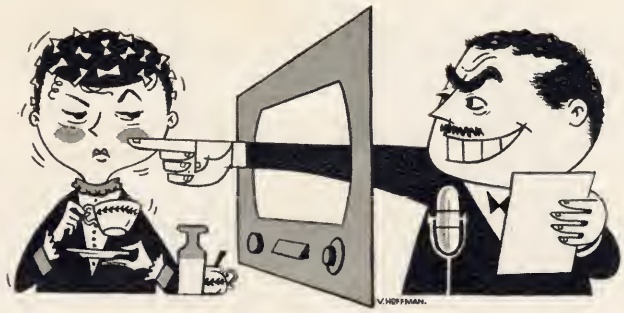
Because of the war, Marion was stranded in the U.S., but she soon caught on with the national company of Harvey, playing the fluttery sister of the alcoholic Mr. Dowd for some five years. Alfred Hitchcock then shanghaied her into a film, Strangers on a Train, where her portrayal of the mother of a psychopath won her critical accolades. Still, she was unknown to the general American public. Then came Mr. Peepers.

As Mrs. Gurney, a part that seems to have been hand-tailored for her, Marion has become one of the genuinely lovable characters on television. Frightened to death of TV, Marion finally came around under the gentle persuasion of Bill Nichols, casting director of the show, and became an immediate success.

Now living comfortably in a fashionable Manhattan hotel, Marion is delighted by her latest triumph.



'Tell me about it later, Marybelle, later . . .'



Who's The Girl Of Today?

THE songwriting fraternity has utilized practically every known object on land or sea as a source of inspiration, so it comes as no sensation when a new song comes out chanting the charms of a girl who watches television early in the morning. What is interesting is that the composers, Charles Grean and Norman Leyden, have stumbled on something big, either by accident or design. Their song, "The Girl of Today" (the girl drinks her coffee while watching the Dave Garroway opus) was quickly snapped up by NBC as a gimmick to hang a contest on and zut! we are off in pursuit of the Girl of Today.

The campaign was officially launched on November 23 when the NBC network started beating the drums. The entire country has been marked off as official contest territory and any girl, single or married, from ages 18 to 35, is eligible. All that is required is that they send in a photograph of themselves to NBC and NBC will do the rest.

Just what they have in mind for what the winner will be like has not really been decided upon, but it's reasonable to assume that she will be good-looking and that she gets up in the morning. A sampling of the song's lyrics may give some idea of what the Girl of Today should be like.

I thought I'd want a cozy little cottage
With a wife who could bake and make a stew,
But now I'll have my breakfast in a streamlined kitchenette,
Some coffee served with kisses is the only thing I'll get,
But she'll be sitting on my lap in front of a TV set,
*That's the Girl of Today.

Clear? Aside from what all this might do to the breakfast food industry, it certainly gives the judges plenty of leeway for making their selection. The judges are all old hands at this sort of thing. On the panel are Dave Garroway, John Robert Powers of model agency fame, Faye Emerson, Molly Parnis, fashion expert, and Lee Wagner of TV Guide. They will appear on the Today program on February 9 for the finals.

After the initial screening is completed, the eight girl finalists will be flown to New York City on February 5 where they will stay at the Savoy Plaza Hotel, a fancy watering spot overlooking Central Park. They will then be taken on the rounds of Manhattan, to theaters and night clubs and loaded down with gifts.

For the winner of the contest, the loot will be far more impressive. She'll win a free trip to Paris for a ten-day vacation with either husband or companion. In addition she'll be outfitted with an entirely new wardrobe and given an audition by NBC.

Casual Clothes

WITH AN

ELEGANT AIR

Lenka Peterson: likes intense colors.

THE "at home" season is upon us and for entertaining at home, for watching television, the women who make the news in TV like casual clothes with an elegant air.

Lenka Peterson, who plays Doris, Ezio Pinza's daughter on the Bonino show, entertains a good deal off stage. She is the wife of a TV director and the mother of two children. "When we aren't working, we like to stay home," Lenka says. "And I think a woman should look prettiest when she's just relaxing."

When buying her "at home" wardrobe, Lenka keeps one important point in mind. "I buy clothes that contrast with my surroundings. Our walls are pale green and I'm a pale blonde. I try to find intense colors that make me stand out."

With two small youngsters and an acting job, she doesn't have time to spend shopping or keeping an enormous wardrobe in order. Whatever she buys has to have unlimited possibilities for wear.

Lenka models a red jet embroidered skirt that can be worn with a variety of blouses. Combined with this black velvet top that is held together with little string straps, the ensemble is festive. Worn with a simple black sweater, it is just right for those less formal moments in the life of a busy mother, wife and TV actress.

She also recommends a charcoal gray wool skirt and blouse banded with striped orange and yellow grosgrain ribbon. The fabric lends an informal note and the skirt can be mixed with any number of colorful tops. With an orange blouse, the outfit is perfect for marketing or TV rehearsal. The matching top, which can also be worn strapless, turns this into a festive outfit.

SPORTS

The Courts Carry The Ball

A couple of victories that are somewhat more important than any accomplished by the Yankees, the Cleveland Browns or Rocky Marciano have been scored lately in the courts. Neither contest was photographed and transmitted to the television screen, but both will have direct effect on the type and quantity of TV sports.

Baseball scored the first and more sweeping victory in the Supreme Court when seven members of that body ruled the game a sport and not a part of interstate commerce within the scope of the anti-trust laws.

Professional football then won a split decision in Federal Court, where it was ruled that the Chicago Bears, New York Giants or Philadelphia Eagles have the legal right to black out television locally when they are playing at home, but do not have the same freedom with regard to telecasts when the club is on the road, or to radio broadcasts at any time.

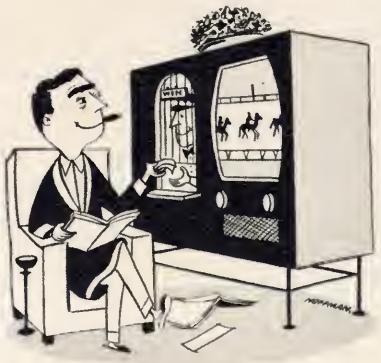
To a mind untrained in legal thinking, one decision seems to have been rendered out of sheer boredom and the other out of considerations of box-office expediency. The Supreme Court justices reached their opinion, the majority decision stated, "Without re-examination of the underlying issues." They merely reaffirmed a decision reached by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in 1922, apparently for no other reason than that Holmes felt that way 31 years ago and they had no further interest in the matter.

In the football case, Federal Judge Grim ruled, in effect, that football teams shouldn't be required to buck television on their home games because it might be ruinous competition, whereas they had to hold still for radio, and for television when they were out of town, because they had not proved that this would hurt them financially.

As he saw it, the chief issue seems to have been: What's good or bad for gate receipts? Thus the rules appear to have been established. After several years of timid temporizing, baseball and football may now take steps to solve their television and radio problem without fear of being accused of restraint of trade.

The impression here is that pro football already has come closer to a solution than anybody else in sports, except the racing people.

Baseball, pretty generally convinced that the major leagues have been ruining the minors by invading minor league territory by radio and television, have wanted to set up some standard limitations but have been afraid of conspiracy charges. Now they can take steps.



Racing, of course, has had the right slant all the time. They've converted countless viewers to their sport by televising big races. Until somebody invents a receiving set with a built-in mutuel window, they know that every new fan created by television will show up eventually in their store.

Our friend Charlie Channel-chaser probably never will make the weight for the Santa Claus class. But Charlie's intentions are of the very best. He consented to dress up like this to remind you there's no gift to equal a TV GUIDE subscription for your dial-twisting friends. Ever since a TV GUIDE subscription cured Charlie's case of video vertigo—induced by too much channel-chasing—he's been our best salesman. As Charlie puts it, "Where else can you find a gift with so much day-in, day-out enjoyment and usefulness?" Where, indeed? So take Charlie's advice. Take advantage of TV GUIDE's special Christmas subscription offer for the folks on your list.
